

What Did the Hospital Do?

In 2004 and 2005, the hospital implemented the formal action plan developed in Step 3, focusing on three main areas:

- Strengthening the focus on patient service
- Improving communication with patients
- Providing support to staff

For example, the hospital:

- Reported individual doctor and nursing unit scores on its own QI survey
- Added the annual nursing service goals for each nursing unit to the agenda of regular meetings
- Included in monthly nursing meetings discussion on specific patient complaints and patient comments on the Picker Hospital Surveys
- Hired from within 70 new charge nurses (35 already held a lead nurse position; 35 were promoted)
- Requested an add-on of $140K to the nursing budget to cover the 5% increase in salary associated with the promotion of 35 new charge nurse positions
- Provided new uniforms for the nursing assistants.

What Were the Results?

By the middle of 2005, the hospital had implemented its improvement strategy. The expectation was that the hospital's and the nursing department's increased focus on emotional support would lead to more positive feedback from patients. There had been minor setbacks in the initial timeline due to threats of nursing strikes and pressures for the nursing leadership to focus on budget cuts. However, the new charge nurse position produced immediate results in that the number of patient complaints dropped in those units where a charge nurse was present.

In this changing environment, the nursing assistants reacted more negatively to their new uniforms than nursing leadership expected; however, the decision was made to keep the uniforms and press on with the other changes.

It is a common in QI initiatives for there to be tension between "staying the course" and "making mid term corrections". This leadership dilemma is often driven by the context of the time and the culture of the organization. In this case, the Chief Nursing Officer chose to "stay the course" because of several reasons. She was intent on figuring out a way to distinguish the nursing assistants from the RNs. Patients not
