CHAPTER 6

PROCESS COSTING

QUESTIONS

1. A company that produces homogeneous goods in mass quantities is likely to use a process costing system. The company can either have a single department or multiple departments.

Job order costing and process costing are similar in that they are both methods of assigning costs to products. Also, the methods use similar product accounts (raw materials, work in process, finished goods, cost of goods sold) to capture the costs associated with production and use similar cost pools (direct material, direct labor, and overhead).

Job order costing and process costing differ in the way in which costs are gathered. In a job order costing system, costs are accumulated by department and by job; in a process costing system, costs are accumulated by production departments for the products that flow through those departments. In process costing, production must be determined on the basis of equivalent units to properly allocate the costs associated with each cost component to the work that was completed during the period and to the work that is still in process at the end of the period. Equivalent units of production are unnecessary in job order costing.

2. The only difference between weighted average and FIFO equivalent units of production is in the treatment of the work that was completed on beginning inventory
