

Week 10 – Social Darwinism, Race, and Human Rights

In the fifth chapter, on race issues, Darwin's work suggests the problems of race theory, based on the erroneous biological arguments, that he is content to reject. He would say that:

...the question of race is not "biological" but "cultural," and therefore its answers depend on the "cultural systems" that we build. This, the "cultural subject" Darwin addresses in this text.

In this section, we will look briefly at racial Darwinism, Eugenics, and the impact of race theory on our lives today.
